CTE Belief Statement

I believe that career and technical education allows individuals to find their true passion and purpose in life. By providing the needed tools to become skilled workers we are not only ready for today's workforce, but also to become responsible American citizens ready to conquer the world. By attending a CTE school, students are able to acknowledge and expand on their own personal strengths while being granted the opportunity to be trained into becoming young professionals.

My Framework Story

“Ma’am, we are going to perform an X-ray on your abdomen. It seems that you are having excessive borborygmi due to peristalsis.” As your physician recites this complex phrase your adrenaline begins to flood your body with concern. However, have no fear. Your doctor is simply ordering an X-ray due to the fact that your body is producing excessive noise coming from your stomach, more commonly known as a “grumbling stomach.” Communication is essential in all aspects of life, especially in the medical field. Through my CTE program, I have learned how to communicate specific information in ways that benefit my patients' understanding, breaking any barriers that would cause confusion while also providing them with comfort and relief. What words and phrases are overly complex in your CTE program, and how do you communicate what they really mean to others?
