History of the CTE Caucuses

The Congressional Career and Technical Education Caucuses are bipartisan groups whose members are committed to supporting and promoting career and technical education (CTE).

House CTE Caucus

In 2007, former Brian Baird (D-Wash.) and Phil English (R-Pa.) launched the Congressional Career and Technical Education Caucus in the U.S. House of Representatives to raise awareness of and support for the CTE community and lead on legislation related to these issues. As those members left Congress, the Caucus leadership was filled by Congressmen Glenn “GT” Thompson (R-Pa.) and James Langevin (D-R.I.). Rep. Langevin retired at the end of the 117th Congress and Rep. Suzanne Bonamici (D-Ore.) joined the Caucus as the new Democratic co-chair in 2023.

The Caucus serves as a promotion vehicle for legislation, ideas and information related to CTE. The mission statement of the Caucus is: “The Career and Technical Education Caucus is a bi-partisan group of Members of Congress created to enhance awareness in Congress of the importance of career and technical education in preparing a well-educated and skilled workforce in America.

Senate CTE Caucus

In 2014, Sens. Tim Kaine (D-Va.) and Rob Portman (R-Ohio) partnered to launch the Senate Career and Technical Education Caucus in conjunction with CTE Month. The senators were later joined as co-chairs by Sens. Tammy Baldwin (D-Wis.) and Mike Enzi (R-Wyo.). As co-chairs, these senators worked to call attention to CTE as a proven method for promoting America’s continued economic growth and ensuring that our students have the skills they need to succeed. In 2015, Sen. Johnny Isakson (R-Ga.) began work as co-chair of the Caucus in place of Sen. Enzi, who had taken on other commitments. In January 2017, Sen. Todd Young (R-Ind.) joined the Caucus leadership as co-chair in place of Sen. Isakson. Sen. Portman retired in 2022 and his replacement has not yet been named.
