When giving examples, be sure to apply the SkillsUSA Framework to the specific career cluster you teach, so students can understand exactly how these skills will be used in their future occupation.

During group projects, class discussions or daily routines, point out immediately when students demonstrate effective teamwork, responsibility or communication skills. Make the SkillsUSA Framework feel real and relevant. Use real-life examples, talk about how these skills matter in jobs and life, and give students lots of chances to practice. And most of all, be consistent. The more a teacher uses the Framework language, the more the students will begin to use it too!
